FOREWORD

The chief characters in "The Ballad of Baby Doe" are drawn from actual figures in American history. Baby Doe, Horace and Augusta Tabor, and their fellow-citizens in Leadville and Denver are recreated from pages of Colorado's fabulous mining era, at the turn of the century. William Jennings Bryan and President Chester A. Arthur, who touch on the story at certain points, reflect the larger American scene as the struggle concerning free gold and silver coinage nearly split the nation asunder.

The dramatic treatment of Tabor's life, and the two women who dominated it, closely follows the pattern of fact. Any shifts in time element and character emphasis have been made to shape the robust chronicle of these lives into the framework of the musical theatre.

The story begins in 1880 at the peak of Tabor's success. After twenty years of poverty, he and his wife, now in their fifties, have attained wealth and power. The classic triangle is formed when Mrs. Elizabeth Doe, known to the miners of Central City as Baby, leaves her husband, Harvey Doe, and comes to Leadville to better her fortunes.

What begins as a flirtation, ends as a deep and abiding love for the man thirty years her senior. But the price of this love is ruin for Tabor. Baby Doe remained true to his memory, however. In 1935, she froze to death at the Matchless Mine, ending the long vigil she had kept there since Tabor's demise in 1899.

"The Ballad of Baby Doe" was first produced at the Central City Opera House, Central City, Colorado, in July 1956; costumes, settings, and lighting by Donald Oenslager; staged by Hanya Holm and Edward Levy; under the musical direction of Emerson Buckley. The principals were:

HORACE TABOR: Walter Cassel—Clifford Harvuot
AUGUSTA: Martha Lipton—Frances Bible
BABY DOE: Dolores Wilson—Leyna Gabriele
MAMA McCOURT: Beatrice Krebs
WILLIAM J. BRYAN: Lawrence Davidson—Norman Treigle

The New York premiere by the N. Y. City Center Opera Company occurred on April 3, 1958, staged by Vladimir Rosing and conducted by Emerson Buckley. The principals were:

HORACE TABOR: Walter Cassel
AUGUSTA: Martha Lipton
BABY DOE: Beverly Sills
MAMA McCOURT: Beatrice Krebs
WILLIAM J. BRYAN: Joshua Hecht

Scene Six

Finale - Act One

A private room in the old Willard Hotel, Washington. The room, a dream of marble pillars, stately fireplaces, old plush carpets, is garlanded with flowers. Stage left, there is a table heaped with flowers and presents, its center piece is six feet high—"a wedding-bell of white roses surmounted by a heart of red roses, which is pierced by an arrow of violets, shot from a Cupid's bow of heliotrope."

The chief entrance to the room, rear center stage, is elevated by a stairway at least six steps high, so that a dramatic or dawdling descent may be made on it.

As the curtain rises, Mrs. McCourt is rushing around the room, arranging the flowers. Mr. McCourt, his son and daughter (with spouses if possible) are sitting uncomfortably on the gilt chairs to one side of the room.

A group of four Dandies (doubtless from the State Department) stand apart and aloof.

Scene Two
A Club Room in Denver 1895

In a cone of light from a hanging lamp, the green felt of a circular gaming table is stacked with poker chips, and splashed with playing cards. Tabor's four cronies are around the table in their shirt sleeves playing poker. As the light comes on they are intent on the game.

Scene Three

A sunny afternoon in 1896. The exterior of the Matchless Mine. The mine itself (which will be seen in a stark simplicity in the epilogue) is now hidden behind scaffolding and bleachers. The miners' wives are decorating the scaffolding with bunting as the curtain rises.

The center stage scaffolding is a speaker's stand, which is furnished with a lectern. The base of the lectern is adorned with a huge photograph of William Jennings Bryan. Below the photograph are the glowing initials: W. J. B. Other banners proclaim "Welcome to Bryan", etc.

The miners' wives are singing as they beautify the scene. They should be heard before the rise of the curtain. Baby Doe enters, followed by her two children and her mother. She is dressed plainly.

Act Two

Scene Five

The stage of the Tabor Grand Theater. 1899.

Allegro moderato

(Piccolo, Solo Vl.) (353)
(pizz. Strg. Piano)

Piano

The musical score consists of six systems of music, each with a grand staff (treble and bass clefs). The key signature is B-flat major (two flats). The time signature is 4/4. The tempo is marked 'Allegro moderato'. The score includes various musical notations such as dynamics (e.g., f), articulation (accents, slurs), and performance instructions. Instrument annotations include: (Trpt.) in the first system; (Ob.) (Cl.) in the fourth system; (Bass Dr.) and (Cymb.) f in the fourth system; and (Hn.) and (Trb.) in the sixth system. Measure numbers 353 and 354 are circled. The score concludes with the instruction 'Curtain' and 'Tabor enters, dressed as a working man.'
